Description

Comprehensive, accurate, and complete patient record documentation forms the foundation of quality dental practice and serves as the basis to establish medical necessity for treatment and benefit eligibility. It serves to capture every element of patient history, existing conditions upon entry to a dental home or practice, diagnosis of all relevant findings of medical and dental disease, comprehensive and alternate treatment plans to address patient needs, and a complete description of treatment rendered. Treatment-related entries must include, but not be limited to, the following: services by specific tooth numbers or letters, quadrant, arch, or other area of treatment; type, brand name, and amounts of restorative material used; type, brand name, location administered, and amounts of anesthetic used; documentation of the results of medical and dental history review at subsequent dental visits; and all other treatment rendered. Each record entry must be signed (not initialed) and dated by the rendering provider.
